Nike has announced that an unknown quantity of new Sumo2 drivers has exceeded the R&A's CT measurement, rendering them illegal. Therefore the company is asking purchasers to submit their club for testing (and if necessary, replacement). Contact Nike before the end of the year for more details.

Bored with simple steel or grey graphite? Why not inject some colour into your game with Shaft Skinz? With airline weight restrictions on the way, travelling golfers are going to struggle to take anything more than the bare essentials. But thanks to one company, at least they won't have to worry about listening to their favourite music or golf instruction videos. This new mini-speaker is tiny, houses all manner of MP3 and digital devices and will run for 12 hours on a single battery.
